SYMPOSIUM ON THE 20TH ANNIVERSARY OF ERISA

PREFACE

On October 29, 1993, the editors and staff of the Law Review had the distinct pleasure of hosting a symposium commemorating "The Twentieth Anniversary of ERISA." The event brought together representatives from government, academia, and the practicing bar to review the history and to comment on the future of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, which turned twenty on Labor Day, 1994. The symposium participants engaged in a lively discussion of the currently compelling issues involving pension and retirement security, health care, and employee benefits. In this issue, the editors and staff have done their best to reproduce the event, presenting the papers and remarks of the speakers, as well as portions of the spirited audience and panel dialogues that took place. In addition, we have included a compendium of pension-related case law in place of the Survey of New York Practice. We hope the efforts of all involved have produced a presentation that will be of great interest and utility to the Law Review's readership.
